

Hey ,

What a week! I can honestly say that we had one bad day on Thursday! Lessons have been learned and its given us the kick in the butt we needed to get real about our goals. Adulting is hard!

February is halfway over and I'm getting antsy. Antsy for the warm weather, antsy to get dirty in the garden. Right on queue, mother nature gave us a Valentine's week snowstorm to put the breaks on spring dreaming. Did I ever mention that winter is not my favorite time of year?

Did I mention that I'm also Type A and have a crazy obsession with planning and organizing? I am a list writer and I research everything. My latest blog post shows my obsession in all its glory!

Planning our gardens is a project I love and hate every year. This year was on a whole different level considering we are adding a ton of flower growing space. Believe it or not, when the planning is done I feel such a sense of relief. Everything we do from here on out should be smooth sailing, only time will tell! Head on over to the blog to read more!

Then get off your phones or laptops and spend some time with your loved ones, pets included, on this Valentine's Day. It's not about the gifts or the cards or the chocolate... it's about showing everyone important to you how much you appreciate them!

And always remember to

#LoveTheLifeYouLive,

Christina
